Trade deficit threatening tight franc'

PARIS, Oct. 27 (R) - French Prime Minister Raymond Barre's determination to keep the franc strong through tight lending policies may come under increasing pressure because of high inflation, rising unemployment and a sizeable trade deficit, French economists said Tuesday.

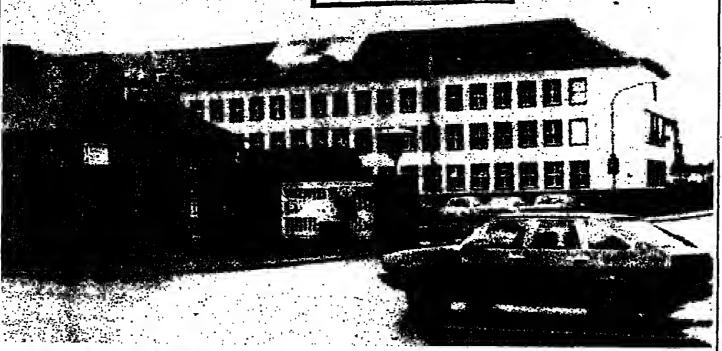

Many think President Valery Giscard d Estaing will be forced to launch a reflationary package before next April's preside elections.

With a 1980 balance of payments deficit forecast at 30 billion francs ($7 billion) compared with a five-billion-frane ($1.1 billion) surplus last year, and inflation running at 13.6 per cent, maintaining the valve of the currency is likely to become increasingly difficult. If the government intends to stand hy Barre's policy it will bave to raise interest rates and reduce France's external deficit by making it more attractive to buy, the economists said.

The French frane has been the strongest carrency within the European Monetary System (EMS) for some weeks as the German mark has weakened. The EMS puts fluctuation constraints on its eight member currencles while they float as a whole against the

However, the French frane has been losing ground against the strong dollar and sterling recently, It was traded Tuesday at 4,32 to the dollar and 10.57 to the pound.

A leading French bank, Credit Commercial de France (CCF) argued recently that a domestic inflation rate well over twice that of West Germany made the frane fairly vulnerable in the long term despite its current good performance. CCF then called for higher interest rates to boost the franc, but another leading bank, Paribas, warned against such a

Majlis make-up defies predictions

By Nicolas B. Tatro

BEIRUT, Oct. 27 (AP) — Despite reports that Iran was eager to solve the hostage crisis, Iran's parliament again has proven to be a volatile assembly that defies predictions.

Even before Sunday's debate on the issue of the 52 Americans held hostage since the U.S. Embassy was seized last Nov. 4, there were warnings from Tehran as well as Washington that the question could not be resolved in a single day,

"It is unpredictable because opinions vary in the majlis," Ali Akbar Nateq Noori, a member of the seven-member special committee on the hostages, said four days before the debate began. " It may take a while because of the importance of the issu:."

Similar views were expressed before Sunday's debate by a diplomatic correspondent for the Iranian news agency Pars who said he did not believe the hostages would be released in the immediate future.

The opening of debate, he said, was a step forward to ending the crisis, but added, " the bostages will not be released soon" - not only because of the difference in opinion within the majlis, or parliament, hat because the United States may find it difficult to meet the conditions.

He mentioned in particular the demand of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini for the return of the late Shah's wealth, much of Iran. The United States has denied aiding either side.

It was one of the reasons for both the extension of the dehate until Monday and the decision to meet behind closed doors, the top aide to mailis speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

The belief that Washington has sided with Iraq in the war is based on longtime U.S. military aid to Jordan - Baghdad's confirmed ally - and on the dispatch of sophisticated radar planes to Saudi Arabia,

South Korea promulgates constitution

SEOUL, Oct. 27 (R) - President Chun Doo-Hwan Monday promulgated South Korea's new constitution which he said was aimed at preventing further waste of national energies.

The country could no longer afford "any continuation of the extreme partisan strife that could imperil the national foundation." he said at a ceremony in the Sejong cultural center in Seoul.

The constitution, the ninth in the country's 32-year history, dissolves the current parliament and dishands existing political parties. It was backed by almost 92 per cent of those voting in a referendum last Wednesday. Commenting on the constitution's provision restricting presidents to a single, sevenyear term, Chun said the tough 1972 Yushin constinution brought in by the late President Park-Chung-Hee, who was assassinated last October after an 18-year rule, virtually precluded a peaceful change of power.

"We have failed to achieve a peaceful change of government by a free choice of the people, even though this should be the touchstone of a democratic constitution," the former army officer said.

"Instead, we have witnessed repeated arbitrary revisions of the constitution designed to permit the chief executive to hold onto power for a prolonged period, thereby virtually precluding a peaceful change of government," he added.

and 14 died of gunshot wounds and a man was knocked down and killed by an ambulance during clashes in which crowds of between 200 and 1,000 stoned buses and police opened fire to disperse them.

The trouble occurred in the Gugulethu, Langa and Nzanga townships. Eyewitnesses said crowds began to gather in the streets soon after the announcement that Mike Weaver of the U.S. had retained his World Boxing Association beavyweight champion-

A procession furmed in the townships outside Cape Town, in which the hlacks, many of them children, held posters of Weaver and chanted his name.

Dr. Abbar said after the meeting that the ministry will hold a series of similar meetings. The aim of the meetings is a comprehensive study on the health services in the holy places. The Ministry of Health made great efforts in this year's pilgrimage and is still planning to provide better services to pilgrims and citizens," Dr. Abbar added.

Meanwhile, Dr. Hani Yusuf Khashokii, the supervisor of the higher studies program of the Riyadh university's faculty of administrative sciences, said the faculty has organized a masters degree program on héalth and

Dr. Khashokji told Al - Jazirah the health sector required physicians, nospitals and administrative personnel. than two million pilgrims in Saudi Arabia with four million eyes and as many ears and hundreds of thousands of visitors and workers -- Arabs, Muslims and foreigners -- i.e. at least five million eyes and five million eyes that neither saw nor heard anything of what the inefficient Libyan information media claim to have heard.

While the wealth of the Libyan people is being drained, SPA said, the new Libyan fallacious scenario is taking childish proportions very expressive of the naivete of Col. Qaddafi. The Lihyan media pretended that the aborted coup attempt was discovered shortly before the zero hour and that a popular revolutioo was sweeping Saudi Arabia now.

To divert attention from the noble aim for which the Kingdom is arming itself with the most sophisticated weapons, the unsuccessful Libyan media and their childish agents claim that the presence of the AWACS planes in the Kingdom's skies at this time is linked with the alleged popular uprising.

But the most ironic aspect, SPA said, is that all what was purported by the Libyan media was absolutely 100 per cent true, except that the name of the country was not correct. Because, Saturday, while denying the allegations, the Kuwaiti paper Al-Anba'e explained that the Arab country it alluded to in which the coup attempt took place, was Libya and oot Saudi Arabia. Al -Anha 'e said that it had the full details of the attempt with geographical and other information but that, at first, it did oot wish to divulge all the information. But owing to what happened afterwards it was compelled to poblish the full details with the name of the country and the persons involved in the attempt. It asked Al -Safir and the Libyan Press Agency to refer to its issue published Saturday to acquaint themselves with the truth.

Meanwhile, the Royal Court Sunday was flooded with messages, including one from a former Libyan prime minister, condemning President Qaddaf7's slander against Islam and the holy places.

The letters, which came from prominent Islamie personalities, pilgrims and ordinary people from all over the world; affirmed that Saudi Arabia is the bastioo of Arabism and Islam and the most reliable custodian of the two Harams and other Islamic shrines.

Hyatt Regency opens Jeddah hotel

By Farouk Luquan

JEDDAH, Oct. 27 — The country's latest addition to a string of deluxe, five-star hotels opened for business recently under the banner of the Hyatt Hotels.

The Hyatt Regency of Jeddah, unique for its Islamie architecture and duplication of Jeddah's own wooden balconies, which are fast disappearing in the downdown area, has all the trappings of a fine hotel plus an excellent location that is close to the business section of the city and yet not too close to the congestion.

It lies astride the two roads leading to and out of the downtown area of the city.

Saleh Itani, regional director of sales, marketing and public relations said that already the occupancy rate has been satisfactory since the "soft opening" and the hotel is becoming increasingly popular with both foreign visitors and domestic tourists coming to Jeddah from other cities. He appeared to be pleased with the patronage which augured well for the future of the hotel, he said.

Built at a cost of SR156 millioo Hyatt has 265 rooms in addition to 19 executive suites (some with kitchenetete), six princely suites, six junior suites and two magnificent royal

The rates, according to Itani, conform with the government regulations for this kind of hotel. They start at SR320 for standard, single rooms and go up to SR360 for deluxe single ones. The executive suite, one bedroom, will cost SR800 while a two-room ooe will cost SR1100. The royal suites will cost SR2200: plus service charges 15 per cent.

While it has all the services of five-star hotels, Hyatt is offering its guests a shuttle service to its Ohhor creek facilities where they can swim in the sea and do scuba diving if they want. Sunbathing will have to be done there since the hotel's own swimming pool and health duh will be built indoors. They should be ready for the formal opening ceremony early next year, according to Antoine

Sokhon, sales manager. Another feature will be the hotel's own Chinese restaurant which was decorated and furnished in typical Chinese fashion with materials imported from

Hong Kong. With an eye for the visiting businessman, the hotel will soon have a library about the Kingdom to provide the visitor with as much information about the country as possible, from telephone numbers to customs and hahits, husiness laws, and what to do and what oot to do here.

"This should save the visitor a lot of trouble." Itani said, "because he will get what he wants right here quickly. He won't need to look around for basic information as some of them do at present."

Hyatt has already two other hotels in the country, one in Yanbu and the other in Israel's Golan annexation a threat to peace--Syria

DAMASCUS, Oct. 27 (Agencies) -Syria has warned that annexation by Israel of the occupied Golan Heights would pose dangers to Middle East and world peace. "The mere fact that the Israeli Knesset (parliament) is discussing such a project constitutes a strong violation of international law, the U.N. Charter and principles of the international system," the Syrian government said in a memorandum Sunday.

The memorandum was sent to U.N. Secretary Geoeral Kurt Waldheim, the chairman of the U.N. Security Council and General Assembly, the secretary general of the Arab League, the secretary general of the Organization of Islamic Conference, the president of the nonaligned nations and the secretary general of the Organization of African Unity.

"Israeli abuses of international law would not have taken place had the Security Council implemented sanctions against it in accordance with the charter. instead of only condemning these violations," the memoradum said

"Syria insists that the world community take practical steps and measures to end once and for all Israel's expansionist and aggressive schemes," it coocluded.

A powerful alliance of Israeli ultranationalists, supported by several Knesset members from the ruling Likud and opposition labor parties, have been waging a campaign for annexation of the Golan Heights area.

In a separate development, Damascus newspapers said Sunday Iraq has been supplying arms and money to the Muslim Brotherhood sect here and is offering to hack "any organization or citizen who will take up arms against the Syrian regime."

The papers supported these charges with "documents" purportedly found in a recent raid on one of the Brotherhood's hiding places in Syria - two letters from Iraqi Vice-Premier Taha Yassin Ramadan last July and August to the Brotherhood's local leader in Aleppo, Adnan Okla.

In the letters Ramadan allegedly said Iraq's ruling Baath Party was ready to % "give financial and military backing to Brotherhood members, provide weapontraining for fighting men, and provide a refuge for the woulded and any who (for safety reasons) wish to leave Syria tem-

In an exchange of toasts in a dinner held at the Abdine Palace Sunday to honor Yitzhak Navon, the Israeli president, Sadat said the hoped-for formula would serve as a "oucleus for a wider Arab-Israeli coexistence."

Concerned Arab countries, particularly Jordan and Syria, along with the Palestine Liberation Organization refused to join the U.S. sponsored autonomy negotiations on ground they would not lead to establishing an independent state for the 1.5 million Palestinians living on the West Bank and the Gaza

The 17-month-old negotiations reached a deadlock after Israel annexed East Jerusalem and insisted on expanding Jewish settlement on occupied Arab territories.

Antonomy delegates from Egypt, Israel and the United States met earlier this month in Washingtoo to prepare for a Camp David style conference suggested by Sadat to revive the talks he suspended twice in less than four months for lack of progress. early next year. Sadat went as far as to describe Navoo's visit as "historie one in the full sense of the word" and a "landmark" on the road for coexistence and frieodship between Egypt

He said the visit would open the door for more contacts on the popular and official levels between the two countries.

"The tremendous historie steps we made have completely changed the struggle to be in commitment for coexistence, good neighborliness and a cormal state between the two conscious countries whose interests may sometime meet and sometimes diverge, Sadat said referring to the treaty the two countries signed in Washington in March last

Sadat said Egypt is determined to maintain the normalization "march persistently and without the least hesitation because we consider peace an irrevocable strategie aim."

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (AP) - Alberto Salazar of the United States made a sensarional marathon debut Sunday, winning the New York City Marathon in record time while Norway's Grete Waitz smashed the women's world record for the third year in a

The Cuban-born Salazar, a member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic team in the 10,000-meter event, had said before the testing 26-mile, 335-yard (42 km) event through New Ynrk City's five boroughs and against a record field of 16,005 entries, that he would run the race in 2 hours, 10 minutes.

It was a bold comment from a 22-year-old who never had run a marathon. Salazar nnt only won the prestigious race against a strong international field, including four-time winner Bill Rodgers, he ran even faster than

His time of 2:09:41 bettered the meet record of 2:10:09 set by Rodgers in 1976.
The world best is 2:08:33 by Australian Derek Clayton at Antwerp, Belgium on May 30, 1969.

Rodgers, seeking an unprecedented fifth straight New York City victory, was among the leaders until shortly after the 14-mile (22 km) mark. But he then fell, and, although he got up and continued running, he never could each the leaders. He finished fifth in 2:13:20, behind Salazar, Mexican Olympian Rodolfo Gomez (2:10:13), England's John Graham (2:11:46), and Jeff Wells of the United States, 2:11:59).

Waitz, a 27-year-old high school teacher from Oslo who is on a year's sabbatical, was clocked in 2:25:41, exactly 16 minutes behind Salazar, in shattering the world mark of 2:27:33 she set in winning the women's division of the New Ynrk City Marathon last

"I decided to run the marathon because my cross country eligibility at the University of Oregon was used up and this was the only time I had to do this," explained the curlyhaired Salazar. "When we go indoors', I will have to concentrate on track.

"People have told me all along that the marathon is my hest event because of the way I train and because of my stride," added Salazar, who said that he almost had to forego

Sunday's race because of a recent injury. Salazar disclosed that he had pulled a hamstring muscle in August, slowing his training to five to six miles per day until mid-October.

"I thought I would have to pull out," he said, "Only in October, when I could start running hard again, was I certain I would be able to run in the marathon."

The stunning victory took a lnt of the pressure off Salazar, whn earlier in the year had been plagued by tendinitis.

"It was a big relief," he said. "A lot of people were saying I couldn't run as fast as I was saying I could.

Salazar followed his pre-race plan per-fectly. He stayed with the leaders through the early parts of the race, then about the 21-mile (33 km) mark he broke away from Gomez and opened a commanding 300-yard (270 m) lead.

Gomez, the sixth-place finisher in the marathon at the summer games in Moscow, said he made the mistake of stopping for water, and that enabled Salazar to pull away. "After that I couldn't catch him," Gomez

THE BENEFICIARY

Unable to conceal their exultation any more Israeli commentators have been expressing their pleasure with the course of events in the war between Iraq and Iran. As it was expected, they said that the war has been of special benefit to Israel reducing the threat to it by a combined force of Iraqis and Iranians which would have been a formidable power that the Jewish state might have found difficult to contend with.

A seminar held in occupied Jerusalem came to the conclusion that the war has spared Israel the possibility of an Islamic - particularly Iranian-Iraqi - alliance against it in the foreseeable future.

The conclusion is not specially novel because it had been foreseen by Muslim and Arab observers right from the beginning who said that the military beneficiary from the war would be Israel. The two sides have destroyed a great deal of their essential material resources and thrown into the battlefield hundreds of thousands of their finest men.

Iraq said it was too intensely provoked by Iran since the revolution; that its lands were occupied by it and that the new regime intensified the attacks on it and incited the Shiite population to revolt and overthrow the Baathist government.

Iran said nothing could not have been resolved through negotiations, but it certainly did not press too hard for talks about outstanding disputes with Iraq when there was plenty of time and chance to do so.

Now that the war has entered its sixth devastating week, it is quite futile to sit in judgement over the righter and the wronger in this agonizing war which has gladdened the hearts of the enemies of Muslims and Arabs everywhere.

The trouble is that even if Iraq achieves its military objectives in the next few days, or has already done so by the capture of Khorramshahr and the siege of Abadan, Iran would not agree to a ceasefire while the Iraqis are still inside it and while it continues to receive aid from other powers. Such a situation is bound to suck in others into the fray, including Israel, which has special interest in fanning the fire of the conflict indefinitely if possible. And as long as the oil tankers keep out of the fire, the rest of the world will not care much about a speedy end to the fighting.

MOVING THE MOUNTAIN

How to move Western Europe's surplus food mountain to where it will be eaten by starving human beings was the question that has supposedly prevented the transfer of millions of tons of unwanted food.

Another question is why the United Nations, or IFAD and FAO do not seriously ponder such a possibility while frantically appealing for food supplies in times of famine which are now being increasingly frequent.

The solution should be found in a special fund to be set up by the richer nations to finance the transportation of food from one country to another. There are so many funds already in operation and another such essential fund will not hurt specially if it is led by an active and dedicated man, preferably from one of the wealthier nations and one who has the necessary persuasive skills to induce governments; corporations and individuals to contribute to it.

This is, of course, assuming that the owners of the food mountains will agree to part with it free of charge for the suffering millions rather than throw it into the dustbin ... or the

Can America meet an oil crisis

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Charles Percy, R-III., is ranking minority member of the Permanent Senate Sub-Committee on Investigations, which is inquiring into America's energy security.) By Charles Percy

WASHINGTON -Since the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, experts on energy and the Middle East have been warning that a major disruption of the international oil supply is a near-certainty sometime in the 1980s. When it comes, I hope America is ready for it. If not, the U.S. may watch the price of oil double or triple again, and I don't think the world economy can afford $100-a-harrel crude.

The war between Iraq and Iran, which has led both sides to curtail production, is yet another reminder of Western vulnerability. Together, they account for more than 10 per cent of world oil exports. If the U.S. lost all this production for any length of time, oil-consuming nations would face a shortage comparable in size to the disruption caused by the Iranian revolution, Because of today's oil glut, President Jimmy Carter and Energy Department officials say America is not likely to see a repetition of last year's gas lines and skyrocketing prices. They may be right, but don't count on it.

The war could spread. Even if it does not, America could feel the effects of any si U.S. imports no oil from Iran and little from Iraq, but many of the countries that do (among them France, Brazil, several Communist-bloc nations) are not parties to international emergency-sharing agreements. The world oil market has enough slack to absorb only about half of the lost oil, so these nations may bid hard for supplies that normally would come to America.

Although oil-industry inventories are at record levels, they offer the nation no significant defense against an oil cutoff unless the U.S. can be sure they would be drawn down in an emergency. One lesson of the 1970s is that inventories tend to increase during shortages as businesses hedge against an uncertain future. Unless the Energy Department wants to order industry reductions, which I don't think it does, all the U.S. can count ou are the 92 million barrels in the strategie reserve. Carter may not want to empty that reserve very quickly, given its small size.

In energy policy, as in the military, the best way to keep crisis from America's door is to look ready, and be ready, to respond. The truth is that the U.S. is not well prepared for a major disruption of supply. It is time to change this.

First, the U.S. must adopt a strategy to restrain world crude-oil prices. The best way is to fill the strategic reserve at the fastest rate that market conditions permit. Until the reserve is much larger than it is now, the best hope for keeping order in the spot market is to join with other oil-consuming nations in a coordinated oil-purchase and inventorydrawdown plan. America should be prepared to act iry. The Energy Department should work with industry to ensure that private stocks would be reduced voluntarily during a shortage. It may be necessary for the government to set an example by preparing to release strategicreserve oil early in an emergency.

Second, the U.S. needs realistic measures to cut gasoline demand quickly. The emphasis must be on speed of implementation, not fine tuning. Let's recognize that gas rationing cannot be carried out fast. enough to matter; hy the time the Energy Department distributed coupons, the unabated shortage might push oil prices high enough to make the coupons worthless. Likewise, America should acknowledge that procedural snarts may keep federal and state emergency conservation programs from coping quickly with the shortage. By contrast, if Congress approved a standby gas tax (with all revenues rebated to the public), the president could put this plan into effect soon after a shortage hit. In the meantime, if necessary, the Energy Department could cut consumption significantly through its license-plate plan limiting each motorist to one gas purchase a week.

Third, America must lay plans to work its way out of a shortage that may last much longer and be far more severe than any in the 1970s. If America did a little homework, it could take advantage of its domestic energy resources. From weatherizing homes to making fuels from biomass to "cracking" more gasoline and home heating oil from each barrel of crude, industry and government could cooperate to get the job done. An emergency might even lead to the breakthroughs many technologies need. What America needs is a "can-do" attitude throughout the nation and a government willing to set priorities and stick with them.

Whether or not Iraq and Iran pose any immediate threat to oil supplies, America should seize upon this crisis and finally do something about energy security. (NYT)

Findley under fire for PLO

SPRINGFIELD, III -

The Arab-Israeli conflict has been transplanted in all its ferocity from the Middle East to a bitter, expensive and apparently close congressional battle on the Midwest prairie. In a classic example of the trend towards single-issue political assaults, veteran Republican Rep. Paul Findley is being castigated for his friendly contacts with Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Responding in large part to newspaper ads calling Findley "a practicing anti-Semite" who supports "Soviet-backed PLO", Jewish contributors coastto-coast have poured more than $300,000-into the campaign of David Robinson, Findley's young Democratic challenger in Illinois' 20th District. Although the 20th is regarded as a swing district.

closely divided between Republicans and Democrats, Findley has been winning re-election there with little trouble since 1962. A sign that might change came last spring, when huge sums from the Jewish community gushed into the war chest of Findley's GOP primary opponent, David Nuesseu, who came close to beating him.

Though Findley has raised sums nearly equal to Robinson's — with $117,000 coming business and professional political committees — the congressman is clearly concerned both personally and politically. He told the Springfield Rotary Club the other day that the charge of anti-Semitism, which he vigorously denied by citing his strong civil rights record, had "really cut me deeply."

Then, counterattacking on the issue for the first time, he contended that his two meetings with Arafat and his correspondence with the PLO leader have the full backing of a rather prominent Jewish Democrat — Robert Strauss, formally President Carter's Middle East negotiator and now the chairman of his re-election campaign. Findley said that during his contacts with Arafat he had conferred frequently with Strauss about what they disclosed and had received hand-written notes from Strauss that "recognized the importance and value of correct communications with Arafat."

It is official administration policy not to deal with the PLO until it recognizes Israel's right to exist: Nevertheless, Findley said, he got another endorsement of his contacts with Arafat from Strauss when he ran into him at the U.S. Capitol

Efforts to reach Strauss for comment were unsuc cessful. But Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., who has helped Robinson raise funds to battle Findley, said in a telephone interview that he would find any Strauss approval of Findley's actions "incredible...outrageous.

Waxman criticized Findley as "The absolute spokesman in Congress for the PLO"

However, another Jewish House member, who said it would be political suicide to be identified, partly defended Findley. While Findley was an ineffective loner on the PLO issue, the congressman said," It's good to have people in Congress speaking for all organizations."

Findley says he believes the only way to bring peace to the Middle East is to find a way to give Palestinians a homeland, and the only realistic way to solve that problem is to talk with the PLO. "My experience so far leads me to believe there is room for compromise," he says. But he quickly adds he "has never missed an opportunity...to urge Arafat to drop terrorism." Robinson says he believes Findley is "sincere but wrong" on the PLO contacts. Campaigning frenetically from coal mine to bowling alley the other day. Robinson said: "I wouldn't object as strenuously if he just stood up on the floor of Congress and said American foreign policy against the PLO is wrong.

A group of European and American scientists has launched a campaign to make Soviet disregard for the human rights provisions of the 1976 Helsinki Declaration a centerpiece at next month's conference in Madrid to review the declaration's implementation. The declaration, which stemmed from a Soviet wish to publicize military and economic detente with the West, places a moral obligation on the Soviet Union to repair its poor human rights record. Now the scientists, who from the Save Yuri Orlov Committee, at the Geneva-based European Center for Nuclear Research (GERN), say the life of Yuri Orlov, one of Russia's leading nuclear physicists, is in danger because of the harsh conditions of his ment in a Sidenan camp since August A report prepared by the committee says Orlov was last month put in an unheated cell to serve six months of solitary confinement during the Siberian winter. He had complained that his mail was regularly delayed. Ordov's health has greatly deteriorated since his imprisonment and the cold could kill him. He was severely weakened by a similar sixmonth sentence up to April this year for trying to smuggle a scientific paper out of the camp. The committee issued a press statement recently asking Western governments to ensure Orlov's case has "a prominent place" at the Madrid conference. "We are convinced that only immediate action can save Orlov's life," the statement says.

The committee calls on scientists everywhere to urge their governments to take some action at the Madrid conference "for Orlov's survival and for the survival of the ideals of academic and intellectual freedom which he symbolizes."

Orlov founded a watchdog group in Moscow in May, 1976, to monitor implementation of the Helsinki Declaration's provisions on human rights. He was among the founding members of Amnesty International's Moscow branch three years earlier. His defense of fellow physicist Andrei Sakharov, among others, led to Orlov's closed trial for anti-Soviet propaganda in 1977, when he was given the maximum sentence of seven years in a concentration camp and five years' exile in Siberia.

To bring pressure on the Soviet government, the Save Yuri Orlov Committee has organized a moratorium on scientific collaboration with Russia until next spring. It complements a similar moratorium, backed by 6,000 scientists from 44 countries, in support of Sakharov and Soviet mathematician Anatoly Shcharansky, who are also under detention although not in concentration

The French National Committee of Physicists has organized a separate indefinite moratorium in support of all three scientists. — (OFNS)

Saudi Arabian Press Review

Al Riyadh and Al Jazirah Monday led with a reported coup attempt against Libyan leader Muammar Qaddafi, which the pro-Libyan Lebanese magazine "Al -Safeer" "twisted and reported as a popular upheaval and a coup attempt in Saudi Arabia. In a banner line, Okaz said Qaddafi has imprisoned 12,000 Libyan pilgrims upon arrival from Saudi Arabia. Al Nadwa reported in a lead story that the Iraqi forces have repelled an Iranian counter-attack on Khorramshahr. Al Medina also led with an abortive Iranian attempt to regain Khorramshahr. Al Bilad ran as its lead story a rising wave of denunciation of Qaddafi's remarks in the Islamic world.

In a front-page story, Al Jazirah reported Israel having supplied arms spare parts to Iran via the Netherlands. Al Riyadh carried as page one story escalating commando activity inside the occupied territory. Jordan's reported confirmation of the convening of the Arab summit conference in Amman next month was given front-page prominence by Al Nadwa while Okaz gave front page treatment to Kuwaiti reports confirming a coup

Newspaper editorials continued to comment on the Libyan President's anti-Islamic attitude which impels him to avail every opportunity to attack Islam and the divine rites. Okaz said in an editorial that the Libyan people are passing a trying time because of Qaddaff's presence as their leader. The paper branded him as a man of imbalanced mentality, as he has been saying it often that the Islamic faith is no more valid in the present age and it needs to be modified. The paper compared Qaddafi with the Roman Nero in the matter of stupidity, saying that Qaddaff's order to sentence the Lihyan pilgrims upon arrival from Saudi Arabia was a good example of his insamity.

Al Medina in an editorial cantioned the Muslims against Qaddaff's evil plots against the faith. It said that the Libyan leader's rash diplomacy and his dubious relations with the Arab and European leftist elements as well as his growing relations with the Communist camp prove that he is keen to show loyalty to the elements of destruction who are set to jeopardize the peace and stability of the Islamic people. The paper went on to say that every Islamic country of the world is preoccupied with its development in different fields, but Qaddafi has found time to revel in fabricating lies and fanning the fire of destruction. The paper felt totally convinced that world Communism and Jewish masonic elements have captured Qaddaff's thinking and are guiding him according to their own whims and wishes.

On the same subject, Al Javirah observed that it was time for Qaddafi to exploit his tongue for the unification of Muslims. The paper wondered why the Libyan leader did not consider it fit to spend a portion of the billions of dollars in his possession in the reconstruction of a village in South Lebanon or in assisting those Arab states which are stricken with poverty and illiteracy. The paper regretted that Qaddafi invariably showed keenness to use his country's resources for the creamon of dissension and encouragement of Muslims to fight among themselves. It reaffirmed that such activities are not becoming of a noble man or people who are fully alive to Arab and Islamic interests. The paper challenged Qaddafi to show a single stance he might havo taken to boost the major Arab issue,

Al Riyadh regretted that, at a time when both the Arab East and West are faced with difficult situations, c)addefi should have opened a new duel of words at the expense of the crucial issues of the nation. The paper reminded that marginal battles enable foreign powers to implement their hostile policies with success. It held the view that the Libyan leader was aware that his stance was not in harmony with the exigencies of Arab action, and wondered whether he was keen to jeopardize Arab efforts toward the solution of their crucial issues. Through his behavior, Qaddafi is proving that he is implementing a part of the international game to confound the prevailing situation, the paper said, adding that Qaddafi knew that he was lying to himself and the world. Al Yom said that Qaddafi has lost his senses and has, therefore, begun to propagate and believe in lies and fabrications. The paper likened Qaddaff's policy to a childish act and added that his anti-Islamic posture has proved that he has become an unprecedented phenomenon in the world of today. He does not know where he stands, for he is neither with Islam nor with Arabism, said the paper, adding that he is actually one of those who have lost all their senses. The paper implored God to help the people of Libya who, it said, would not allow Qaddaft to play with the destiny and reputation of their

LOS ANGELES, (LAT) - Peter and his family dropped by for a late afternoon drink. They were hot. They were bothered. too, with ao overlay of bewildered. Bewitched they weren't.

Peter had just been to see about passports for his and wife Birgit's brood. A family trip to the old country was what Peter had in mind. Any old country.

There bad been complications. Not serious, just annoying. Peter's wife is a foreigner, an alien, if you will. I sympathized. My wife, 100, is an alien — an ugly word. Peter and I agree. (Of course, when we are in our wives' respective countries, Peter and I are the gliens. Our wives revel in the reversal.)

Further moddling Peter's passport procedure was the " sailing permit" required of departing aliens, and the fact that Peter's children, like mine, were born on " foreign soil." (If the truth were known, they were born in hospitals, even as you and I, but let it

What my wife had, in fact - the sole and only paper upon which her name appeared was a membership card to the Standard Athletic Club, a modest British playground in the Paris suburb of Meudon. (When Dorothy forgets, she doesn't just mess around.) And what, pray, is this?" asked the

Aboard the SAS flight nn the first leg of our trip, Dorothy looked a little disturbed. Ticked off, you might say damned mad. This was not like ber.

In any case, the lack of a passport was discovered at the last possible moment while we were maneuvering through the penultimate turnstile in the maze that is Orly.

"Passeports, s'il vous plait," said the Frenchman at the turnstile.

" We have this little problem, " I said. " A bagatelle. I have my passport, as you can see, but my wife has left hers at home. This is of no consequence, of course, because my wife is married to me and I have my passport."

En route to Sweden there was a stopover in Copenhagen. It was there that I began to appreciate the extent of Dorothy's apprehension. Nigeria operates new oil refinery

LAGOS, Oct. 27 (AFP) — Nigerian President Shehu Shagari has inaugurated the country's most important oil refinery at Kaduna in northern Nigeria. Shagari, noting that Nigeria was Africa's largest oil producer, said at the ceremony that his country "had short term and long term policies which will govern our level of oil production at any given time."

The president said Sunday that "in the short term levels production will be related to the absorptive capacity of the oil market as well as to our obligations as a committed member of OPEC (the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries)."

"In the long term," he said, it will be influenced by our estimated reserve so as to produce a healthy balance between what is exploited and what is deliberately left in the ground for strategie reasons. In the area of crude sales, we shall diversify our customers nn both geographical and ideological bases." The Nigerian chief of state had declared

U.S. urged not to supply Iran with military aid

MANAMA, Bahrain, Oct. 27 (AP) - The United States would "precipitate a very grave oil situatinn' and alienate the moderate powers of the Gulf reginn if it tilted the military scales in Iran's favor against Iraq, a high Arab official cautioned Sunday. "It would be utter folly if Washington were to supply Iran with weapons and spare parts, because that would most certainly tilt the military scales against Iraq," said the official, who refused to

He warned that Gulf oil producers who have been considering incremental production to offset a supply shortfall of about four million barrels a day from Iraq and Iran "would be insufferable offended if Washington helped Iran in the war with Iraq."

"Anti-American feelings already are brewing in the Gulf region, with some Arab governments producing more oil than they should, only to help out the nnn-Communist industrialized nations," he said. "These governments have been raising their production levels against the wills of their peoples who

Ozal to attend

ANKARA, Oct. 27 (R) - Turkey's main economic planner, Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal, left Monday for Paris where he was expected to confer with Western states on his country's economic progress following large injections of foreign aid this year.

Ozal, who retained responsibility for the economy when the military seized power last month, will be attending a meeting of the Organization for Economie Cooperation and ters are considering a suggestion by Venezuela that OPEC hold a special meeting because of the war between Iran and Iraq, Gulf oil ministry sources said Monday. Venezuela proposed the meeting in a telex sent to the countries of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) but did not specify a date, they said.

The meeting would consider the effects on the world oil market of the war which has halted oil exports from Iran and Iraq of almost four million barrels a day. The ministers are due to meet in Indonesia in December.

Guif oil analysts fear the shortfall in world oil supplies could lead to another price explosion and shortages despite present high stocks in consuming countries and increased production by some Gulf countries.

One example is Saudi Arabia where an oil ministry source in Riyadh confirmed Sunday that Saudi production was above 9.5 million barrels a day but declined to give figures.

Meanwhile, oil production of OPEC fell in August for the sixth consecutive month, reaching its lowest level since January 1976, Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, published in New Ynrk said Monday.

The industry newsletter said OPEC nil output during the month totalled 27.1 million barrels a day, down six per cent from July.

Total world output fir the month topped

July levels because of higher production by Mexico and the Soviet Union. However, world output was still helow 1979 levels. Iran showed the sharpest decline from July as ontput fell an estimated 200,000 barrels to 1.3 million barrels a day, the publication said. Kuwait was the only major OPEC producer to show an increase, with production rising by 900,000 barrels to 1.4 million barreis a day,

U.K. to take drastic steps to counter spending deficit

LONDON, Oct. 27 (AFP) — The British government will announce drastic public spending cuts, of the order of $4,800 million this week, reliable sources said here Monday. The House of Commons resumes work this week after the summer recess and observers believed that Chancellor of he Exchequer Sir Geofrey Howe might immediately submit a program of stringent measures to staunch a growing public spending deficit.

The first sectors to be affected are expected to be education and social services. But, as was leaked to the press last week provoking government fury, the treasury also wants to chop the country's defense budget hy a massive $1000 million a year until 1984. Conserexpected to fight the social services cuts, but several have already lodged firm protests against the government's defense spending cutbacks. Boosting Britain's military defense was a key point in the conservative election program, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is expected to have a tough time conciliating the treasury and the ministry of defense.

The treasury is determined to trim public spending in its battle to control monetary supply. This policy form the keystone of its fight against inflation, currently running at around 15 per cent. Observers noted this week that the treasury would put up a determined fight for the cuts as attempts to control the money supply had so far been disappointing, with public spending reportedly 20 per cent up on past years figures.

As parliament gets back to work, public sector employees enter a major round of pay negotiation, in which the government is determined to keep rises between five and nine per cent.

Iraq seeks EEC goodwill ECHTERNACH, Luxembourg Oct. 27

(R) - Iraq has asked the European Common Market to mediate in its war with Iran but the initiatives already started by Islamic states, EEC diplomats said here Monday.

Community Foreign Ministers, meeting here in informal session, were told by Luxembourg's Gaston Thorn that he had received a letter from Acting Iraqi Foreign Minister Hamed Alwan Friday.

Thorn, current chairman of the EEC council of ministers, told journalists the letter only explained Baghdad's point of view but the diplomats said it did ask the European Community to mediate. The ministers decided there was little they could do, the diplomats

The ministers also reviewed the preparations for their European Security Conference, to open in Madrid Nov. 11.

The ministers also confirmed they would lift economic sanction on Iran, imposed last May, when the U.S. hostages in Tehran were freed. In theory this could lead total resump-tion of arms deliveries to Iran. But Thorn said the Iraqi letter contained an "implicit warning" to EEC countries against sending sup-

On the Middle East, the ministers discussed Thorn's recent tour of the area when he explored the possibility of the community playing a more active role in the search for a peace settlement.

The issue will he taken up by West European leaders at the next Common Market summit in December, diplomats said.

The most difficult part of dummy play is to determine how the defenders' cards are divided. Fortunately, there are clues in almost every hand that enable declarer to accomplish this, and once he deduces where the key cards are located, declarer can almost invariably score every trick he is entitled to.

Take this deal where failed to take advantage of a the same time as he discarded reliable clue. West led the king 'the club loser from his hand.

of diamonds, which held, and continued with the ten, won by East with the ace. East returned the ten of hearts, covered by the Q-K-A. South later lost a heart and a club and so went down one.

On the surface it seems that South did nothing wrong. He had four losers — and he lost them. But, actually, South missed his cue when he covered East's ten of hearts with the queen. He should have played the six instead!

Undoubtedly, he played the queen in the hope of finding East with the king. However, this was not a realistic view, since the defenders could have arranged for West to be on lead at trick three instead of East, and would have done so if East had had the king of hearts. Their plays indicated that West had the king.

Had South played the six on the ten, he would have made the contract by taking the ace, drawing trumps, ruffing a diamond in dummy, cashing the A-K of clubs, then playing a heart to the queen. West would take the king but, with only hearts and diamonds left, he would be forced to return one or the other. This would allow declarer to ruff in dummy at © 1980 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

NEW DELHI, Oct. 27 (AFP) — Indian Prime Minister Iodira Gandhi has told jurists summoned here to consider reforming the 30-year-old Iodian coostitution to give thought to the creation of a presideotial sys-

She urged India's jurists, intellectuals and politicians to begin discussing the possibility of "other forms of government" than the parliamentary regime based oo the English model by the Indian constitution. After stressing the "constant and permanent need" to examine the consotution to keep it abreast of changing times, Mrs. Gandhi said the role and resposibility of the opposition was increasingly teoding towards agitation, and added that "violence and mocracy cannot coexist."

Mrs. Gandhi referred to the examples of France and the United States to show that presideotial regimes were oot antidemocratic. A mong foreign observers invited to the meeting were Professor Roger Pinto of Paris and William Sheffield of New York,

A large majority in favour of the presidential system emerged from the meeting, which was described Suoday by India's opposition journalist and writer Kuldip Nayar, in the Indian express, as "Mrs. Gandh's inspired jamboree of lawyers, most of them briefless." Socialist oppositioo leader Madhu Limaye meanwhile warned the opposition against Mrs. Gandhi's "insidious attempts" to reduce the prerogatives of Parliament. It was Parli-ament that in 1978 ordered Mrs. Gandhi's imprisonment for eight days.

Counting of votes began Monday but the final results are not expected to be known before Friday because of communications

President Julius Nyerere, the single ruling party's sole presidential candidate, was expected to win the required minumum 50 per ceot of "Yes" votes to be re-elected for another five-year term.

Polling was also for or against the sole vice-presidential candidate and head of state of the isle of Zanzibar, Aboud Jumbe, who must also win 50 per cent of votes cast to be returned. In the legislative elections, vot ers were choosing between two party candidates for the 239 elected members of the thousands of Fiat auto workers. The position Berlinguer took in the conflict earlier this month fanned already simmering animosities against him in the party leadership. As a result the Communist leader has been asked to "explain himself" at a party central committee meeting Nov. 3 to 5.

No "revolutioo" is expected. Above all, the Italian Communists will he trying to regain their unity and redefine policy lines, observers said here. During the Fiat incident Berlinguer stayed faithful to a hardline policy that has characterized the ICP since the end of 1978. He went specially to Turin to assure the strikers, facing massive layoffs, of his party's "unconditional" support should they decide to occupy Fiat factories. Earlier he caused a stir hy saying oegotiations on the issue should have been held in Turin instead of Rome and broadcast over a loudspeaker to the workers.

The party's moderate wing, led by Giorgio Napolitano, has openly criocized these posioons. It believes the unions' failure in the Fiat incident was also the party's.

The Communist leader made a mistake by siding with the extremists, who turned out to.

articles and statements published in the Italian press. Giancarlo Pajetta, considered a likely candidate for party president following former President Luigi Loogo's death earlier this month, joined in, saying Berlinguer had lost sight of the ICP's traditional caotion.

Another weapon for Berlinguer critics was an analysis published in 1979 by former militant Giorgio Ameodola, who died last June, predicting all that happened in the Fiat conflict - particularly divisions among the workers, going as far as actual "revolt" on

The stage seemed set for ao explosive battle of wills between the IRA protesters and the British government. The hunger strikers warned in a smuggled statement Friday they are prepared to starve themselves "to ao agonizing death."

The hunger strikers will, the prisoners say, refuse all food, but will take liquids. The British have said they will out force-feed the

London N march draws 50,000

LONDON, Oct, 27 (AP) - Spurred by British agreement to accept U.S. ouclear Cruise missiles, some 50,000 demonstrators marched on Londoo's Trafalgar Square on Suoday to the biggest anti-nuclear demonstradon here for nearly 20 years.

In scenes reminiscent of the early 1960s — the heyday of British and nuclear campaigners - police sealed off roads to central London and traffic was snarled as the bannercarrying protestors marched slowly some 4 kilometers from Hyde Park corner.

Former Eoergy Secretary Tony Benn, 55. the leading left-winger of Britain's opposi-Oon Labor Party, theater personalioes and veteran "ban the bomb" activists were among speakers who addressed the crowd beneath a giant picture of a crying bahy born into a nuclear holocaust.

The rally was organized by the campaign for nuclear disarmament. But it attracted dozens of other organizations - from the left wing of the Labor Party, through eovironental groups, some trade unionists, members of the centrist Liberal Party, and the leaders of Britaio's tiny Communist Party.

Police, who estimated the crowd at 50,000 reported 12 arrests, mainly when a group of young demonstrators, following a rock group, spilled into nearby Whitehall, sear of British government offices. But the demonstratioo was largely peaceful, Michael Foot, deputy Labor Party leader aod a strong contender in a leadership vote starting Nov. 4, said in a radio interview Sunday that he would "send back" the Cruise missiles if he became the next British prime minister.

Hostages, TV debate preeminent

campaign enters final week

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (R) — The 1980 race for the U.S. presidency entered its last week Monday with the spotlight on two imponderables that could swing the election: the hostages in Iran and a televised debate Tuesday night.

Aides of President Jimmy Carter and Republican challenger Ronald Reagan

Kaunda says he smashed coup attempt LUSAKA, Zambia, Oct. 27 (R) - President Kenneth Kaunda Monday accused what he termed a group of Zambian "antirevolutionaries" supported by an armed gang of mainly foreign mercenaries and South Africa of planning a coup against his government on the night of Oct. 16-17. Kaunda told a news conference at state bouse in Lusaka that Zambian security forces had learned of the impending attack and had struck first at elements of the gang camped on a farm just south of the capital on the night before the alleged coup attempt was to take place.

The president had called the news conference to explain his reasons for introducing an indefinite, dusk-to-dawn curfew on most of Zambia's big towns and cities last Thursday on the eve of the country's independence day

Tiniest trans-Pacific boat makes Australia

SYDNEY, Oct. 27 (AP) - Webh Chiles sailed into Cairne harbor Monday, completing a 13,685 km Pacific crossing in an open 6-meter boat, the smallest vessel ever to make the voyage.

Chiles, whose boat was wrecked on the way on an island in Vanaatu, formerly the New Hebrides, said on arrival the last 2,700-km leg of the voyage was "the most uneventful of the trip." "It can't all be death-defying," he said.

Customs and immigrations officials at Cairns, 12,012 km north of Sydney on the Great Barrier Reef, were incredulous: when he came ashore and told them he had arrived from America and wanted harbor clearance. "They didn't believe it." he said.

Chiles, 38, set sail from San Diego. California, in his boat, Chidiock Tich - borne, on Nov. 7, 1978 in an attempt to be the first person to circumnavigate the world single-handed in an open boat. On May 10 this year, three days after leaving Fiji en route to Papua New Guinea, his boat hit a half submerged object and swamped. He took to his rubber life raft, and, secured to the crippled Chidiock Tichborne, drifted 480 km in 14 days before being washed over a reef on an island in the New Hebrides archipelago. He was rescued by villagers, flown to bospital with acute malantrition and badly infected feet. After recuperating, be repaired the boat and set sail for Australia on Oct. 9. "I'm in the best ever shape," he said, "but I've been troubled more by sunburn this time." He said he will spend the cyclone season in Cairns before setting sail on the next leg of the voyage around the world. He plans to sail in the new year to Indonesia, India then to the Mediterranean via the Suez Canal.

He plans to be back in San Diego "in 83 or maybe 84."

Chiles, who has previously circumnavigated solo in a much larger yacht, writes books and magazine articles about his voyages. He does it, he says, "because I want to go to the edge of human experience."

His boat, with no protection from the elements, is so small that he has to sit on the floorboards and steer by hand. He sleeps stretched out in the bottom of the boat, which has no bunks.

agreed that these two events could render all the campaigning done by the two men to date all but irrelevant.

The outcome of one of them, the Iranian hostage crisis, was out of their hands while the Iranian parliament debated terms for the release of the 52 Americans held since last Nov. 4. Instead they devoted their attention to the other event, the 90-minute debate in Cleveland, Ohio, which will be their only direct confrontation of the campaign.

Carter spent Monday morning in the White House, made a hrief afternoon trip to Huntington, West Virginia, and then was to fly to Cleveland.

Reagan, staying at his rented estate near Washington, was due to have lunch with former President Gerald Ford, whose performance in a debate with Carter four years ago prohably cost him the presidency. Reagan did not plan to go to Cleveland until a few hours before the start of the debate at 0230 GMT on Wednesday.

Independent candidate John Anderson, campaigning in Wisconsin Monday, has been excluded from the debate. But he will reply to the questions as they are asked of the two major party candidates on a delayed tape hroadcast on the new Cahle News Network, which reaches about three million subscrib-

Carter's running mate, Vice-President Walter Mondale, and their campaign manager, Robert Strauss, both maintained in separate television interviews Sunday that the administration has not used the hostage issue to bolster its re-election chances.

Mondale said the administration was trying to diminish exaggerated expectations rather than encouraging optimism that the bostages would be freed hefore election day Nov. 4.

Strauss said Iran's leader, Ayatollah Khomeini, despised Carter and would rather hurt him than help him. The latest opinion polls put Carter and Reagan virtually level in popular support. Time magazine's poll gave Carter 42 per cent support to 41 per cent for Reagan, while Newsweek magazine put it 41-40 in Carter's favor.

Radicals urge protest

Poles may strike again

WARSAW, Oct. 27 (R) - Radical members of Poland's biggest labor union, Solidarity, were expected to call Monday for another strike in protest against judicial action to harness the union movement. But Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was expected to resist the strike call at a meeting of the six-millionstrong union's regional bosses in Gdansk.

Although infuriated by a court decision last Friday, which be has called the illegal legislation of his union, Walesa is known to favor other means of tackling the issue. Solidarity was legally recognized in Warsaw after a four-week court battle which ended with a judge reading into the union's statutes clauses which Solidarity said it could not accept.

These clauses limited the union's right to strike, and tied the movement firmly to the supremacy of Communism in Poland and to the adherence of Poland's international alliances.

Solidarity issued a statement on Saturday saying the court's decision appeared to mean that the authorities were seeking to gain control of the movement. Walesa has announced he will appeal against the amendments to the statutes in the supreme conrt. Other Solidarity groups throughout the country have rejected the court's decision.

Their immediate reaction indicated that Poland's protracted industrial crisis was not yet over but the authorities are clearly boping. that in the long term the legalization of Solidarity will restore calm to the country.

They bope that after the union's initial fury, it will settle down, face reality and get on with the business of looking after workers' welfare, government sources said. The authorities bave justified the political insertions in Solidarity's statutes on the grounds that Poland must remain fully committed to the Soviet bloc Communist system.

1 ekere lawyer confirms muruer facts

SALISBURY, Oct. 27 (R) - A British lawyer acting for Manpower Minister Edgar Tekere said in court Monday that the minister did not dispute the facts on which the state bases murder charges against him.

But Louis Blom-Cooper told the high court the minister would argue that he should be discharged because he was acting in good faith to suppress terrorism and the court thus had no jurisdiction. The state bas accused Tekere of murdering farm manager Gerald Adamson, 68, at Statford Farm near Salisbury last Aug. 4. Seven of the minister's bodyguards face the same charges.

'I can say here and now that, subject to minor detail, there is no dispute to the facts set out in the summary of state case," Blom-Cooper, told Judge John Pitman. "The primary facts are not in dispute: that the events of Aug. 4 at the farm took place and all eight persons were there and took part in them," Blom-Cooper said.

The surprise statement came during a court session called to hear an application by Blom-Cooper for Pitman to he taken off the case. The British lawyer quoted an act drawn up by the country's former white Rhodesian anthorities in 1975 exempting government leaders from prosecution for acts aimed at countering terrorism — then designed to sanction moves against Patriotic Front guer-

"If the court is of the opinion that the Edgar Tekere minister was acting in good faith for the purposes of the suppression of terrorism then the court will have to stop the proceedings and discharge Tekere and the other seven accused," Blom-Cooper said.

He said he was applying for Pitman to withdraw from the case because Tekere believed that the white judge would be biased against him. Until recently Pitman and Tekere had been on opposite sides in the country's civil war. Blom-Cooper said.

Gold dips; pound cuts dollar's rise

LONDON, Oct. 27 (AP) - The dollar posted gains against most key currencies in early trading Monday, but continued to lose ground against the strong British pound. The price of gold dipped.

Dealers voiced higher U.S. and Eurodollar interest rates as the main factors hebind the dollar's improvement. The only currency against which the dollar faltered was the British pound, which has been buoyed up for weeks on the strength of high British interest rates and North Sea oil.

The pound opened strong at $2.44835 and by mid-morning had climbed to $2.4520 one of its highest levels since 1974. It cost $2.4390 to buy one pound at Friday's close.

District in ruins after attack by pro-Amin force

KAMPALA, Oct. 27 (AP) - Arua, district capital of Uganda's northern West Nile region, was reported by travelers Monday to be in ruins following an invasion by troops loyal to ousted President Idi Amin.

The travelers said large sections of the fown have also been looted and many building destroyed in fighting that erupted Oct. 6 when Amin loyalists attacked from neighboring Zaire and Sudan.

Reports from the region still are confused, but it appeared thousands of tribesmen in the West Nile region still loyal to Amin have fled to Zaire from counter-attacking Ugandan and Tanzanian forces. The travelers said sev-.

In Tokyo, where the business day ends before Europe's begins, the dollar closed at 214 yen, up from Friday's closer of 212.55

The price of gold opened in Zurich, Europe's main builion martket, at $631.50 ounce. $4 down from Friday's close. But it later climbed hack to $634.50 an ounce, one dollar up on Friday's close.

Brokers reported that trading quiet and said gold's rally followed price increases in New York late Friday. They said that speculation the U.S. hostages may soon be freed by Iran also has pepped gold prices up. Silver in London also fell slightly to $18.97 an ounce from Friday's $19.05.

eral thousand people in the area have taken refuge in church missions to avoid retribution by government forces in the region, Amin's home district.

Diplomatie sources here said Tanzanian troops are protecting the missions and are trying to calm the situation. The Tanzanians are part of more than 10,000 troops who remained in Uganda after Amin was ousted 16 months ago. They claim to be serving as a peace-keeping force for Uganda.

Many of the local people of the Kawa and Lughara tribes which straddle the Uganda-Zaire horder were reported to have welcomed the invaders and in some cases joined forces with them.

Deserters train urban warriors

Afghanistan faces winter of famine, fighting

NEW DELHI, Oct. 27 (Guardian) -Afghanistan faces a winter of famine, spreading disease - including polio, leprosy and tuberculosis - and possibly a "sensational" campaign of urban warfare.

The warnings of impending bunger and the already-present disease come from diplomadecline of Afghanistan from a state which virtually supported itself in food before the first Communist revolution in 1978, to its present predicament.

The threat to fierce winter fighting in towns and cities comes from a former lieutenant, who deserted from the Afghan army shortly after the Soviet invasion last December. Muhammad Sherrif, age 29, told a press couference here that, until recently, be had been conducting training courses in urban guerrilla warfare in Kabul.

Muhammad Sherrif said he was affiliated with a new group, called the United Front of Afghanistan, and that many of its other members were drawn from officer deserters. He said their area of operation was, in Kabul itself, north of the capital towards the Panjsheer Valley, and as far as Kunduz. He and his former Afghan army comrades were responsible for two thousand cells of Mujahideen in this region — each containing 10 to 15 people — although he estimated that, country-wide, the various rival groups had about 40,000 men under arms.

"Kabul is now a center for training urban guerrillas," Muhammad Sherriff said. "I predict that within three months sensational things will he happening.'

Afghan refugees who had fled into Kabul needed to be trained in many things, including the use of motorcycles and cars, so they can learn to get themselves quickly into and out of trouble.

Muhammad Sherriff added: "The thing that still gives me my greatest thrill was the destruction of one Russian tank and one Russian jeep on the road to Istalif (a village north of Kabul). We had been told these vehicles were coming, and we waited at a bridge, there were two tanks with the jeep driving between. A Mnishideen hit the first tank with a captured Russian-made rocket launcher and knocked it out. Simultaneously, a heavy machine gun fired on the jeep and killed the occupants. But the second tank killed the Mujahideen who had the rocket launcher and then the tank fled, and we did too." In Kabul itself, the curfew has been extended by two hours. It now runs from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m.

Diplomatic sources in Delhi said that although the official explanation was the longer bours of darkness with the approach of winter, the actual reason must be the increasing incidence of insurgent attacks in and around Kabul.

Firing echoes through the capital every night and short exchanges have taken place in several residential areas, including Mic-roroyan, the site of the Soviet residential and office complex.

After a brief lull, major battles appear to be recommencing in the countryside. A large column of armored vehicles, said to number "several hundred" recently left Kabul for Lowgar province, and helicopter gunships, including the sophisticated MI-24, have also been seen heading in that direction.

Diplomats in Delhi say no reports have yet been received of large-scale battles there, although fighting apparently has taken place at the bead of the Lowgar Valley and that the Mujahideen had closed the road further down.

The grim military picture is backed by another every bit as stark: the creation of free-fire zones around some towns and cities, the exodus of refugees, and the general disruption of war, have caused a slump in agricultural production. One indicator of the effect this is having, is that Babrak Karmal, installed as president after the Soviet invasion last December, is now handing out cheap, or even free, food to those who will support him.

Two days before Karmal's departure for Moscow, his council of ministers approved the distribution of 20,000 tans of Sovietdonated rice to government officials at a price equivalent to 25 cents a kilo. An Afghan who goes down to the Kabul market can expect to pay between 75 and 90 cents a kilo. In addition, free wheat and oil is to be supplied to "patriots fighting against rebels in Kunduz, Jauzjan, Bakh and Samangan provinces," the council decreed.

Diplomats here point out that significant actrages of crops have been destroyed, thousands of sheep and cattle killed, and an estimated 1.25 million head of cattle herded across the border into Pakistan by refugee families.

"A real danger exists of famine in the country," the sources said. Both the main regime-controlled newspaper the Kahul Times, and Kabul Radio, have carried many reports of Soviet grant-in-aid commodities, included foodstuffs, being distributed to government employees, certain students and selected military personnel.
